User stories

Description: The primary goal of the website is to offer some opinions about travel destinations. Users will put in available time, and choose their preference about the destination. Destinations and their information, including hotel, flight, visa, historical weather, and featuring spots, will be presented on the website. If the user did not input any preference, the website would return some random places for the user.

1. I would love to see scenic spots and sites in other places and maybe rich with historical backgrounds and interesting culture, but I can't find a destination based on friend recommendations or experiences from other people. I would like to have some other opinions. Also, I love to walk around and see sites and buildings and be close to a local festival celebration, and maybe hotels that are close to the sites.

2. For the upcoming spring break, I want to figure out a nice and warm place to have a relaxing vacation, and don't need to hurry about seeing different attractions. Somewhere cozy and comfortable would be the best choice. I also would like to take a look at the price of hotel, resort and flight and be able to book them, but I have been to all the beaches near me, and don't want to be on a packed beach. I hope that I can find somewhere not as popular but still decent.

3. I am planning for a short trip next month with my family, but we still want to go aboard. Since we don't have enough time, I have to figure out my destination and visa information as soon as I can. We would like to go somewhere that's visa exemption and if it is in Europe, it would be the best. However, I can not make my decision about where exactly we want to visit, so I want to see some more options in Europe specifically.

4. As a college student, I want to plan a trip for next break. I am open to any kind of place and want to figure out somewhere that I have never heard of. I would like to have a website where I don't input any criteria. Then random places would pop up along with their information and some reviews based on personal experience.
